Foreword

Urban health planners have the responsibility to ensure that health service delivery facilities are situated in convenient and accessible locations for the use of those who are most in needs. Preparation of an inventory of geographical location of these facilities can help to identify gaps and overlaps to improve coordination of services at local level. This inventory "ESP services in Dhaka City: An inventory of GOB and NGO health facilities" is the outcome of the survey of urban ESP services conducted by the Operations Research Project of ICDDR,B: Centre for Health and Population Research. The project has worked closely with the Dhaka City Corporation (DCC), Urban Primary Health Care Project (UPHCP), Immunization and Other Child Health (IOCH) Project and other Non-government organizations (NGOs) in a partnership to improve urban ESP services. One of the major objectives of the Project is to develop mechanisms for local level planning, coordination and implementation of ESP services in the urban areas. The partnership is jointly guided by the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare (MOHFW) and Ministry of Local Government Rural Development and Cooperatives (MOLGRDC) through the Interministerial Urban PHC/EPI/FP Coordination Committee.

This inventory provides us above mentioned information to establish practical mechanisms of coordination among service providers with the opportunity to minimize the gaps and overlaps through reorganizing and reallocating service delivery points with mutual understanding among service providers and community leaders depending on community needs.

I whole heartedly appreciate the effort undertaken by Operations Research Project in conducting the critical study and publishing the report.

This is a comprehensive inventory and handy volume and will serve as a ready reference to locate the working areas of different organizations within Dhaka City Corporation. Using this inventory, the Urban health planners and providers will be able to find out easily the location of the ESP service outlets, services they provide, technical staff involved, working days of the facilities and the locations of referral centres. The document will help the policy makers to draw policy decisions to allocate provision of services in the areas where people are underserved.

I would like to congratulate those involved with the whole process of conducting such an important and useful study.

Mohammad Hanif
Mayor
Dhaka City Corporation

Introduction

The national strategy for the health and population sector in Bangladesh emphasizes the need to improve the supply and use of the services included in the Essential Services Package (ESP). For rural areas, the Ministry of Health and Family Welfare (MOHFW) has, over the years, established a large infrastructure for the delivery of these services. The current Health and Population Sector Programme (HPSP) is designed to streamline and further increase the effectiveness of the sector in rural areas.

Current national policies give city corporations the mandate to coordinate the provision of essential health services within their area of jurisdiction.

In city corporations and municipalities, some or all of the services included in the ESP are available from several agencies. An inventory of health and family planning facilities carried out in 1995 showed that, in addition to MOHFW, other agencies involved in urban service delivery of essential services, included the health departments of municipalities and a large number of non-government organizations (NGOs). The inventory also identified an urban health and population sector component made up of pharmacies, private practitioners, private nursing homes, clinics and hospitals, etc. [1]. Studies conducted in Dhaka City indicate that these service delivery agencies co-exist with little coordination, communication and referrals, even within the public sector where providers from different departments often share the same premises [2, 3]. Thus, despite the presence of multiple providers, some basic health indicators, such as the proportion of immunized children and the percentage of couples practicing family planning are significantly and persistently lower in the slum areas of the city [2, 4]. In other words, the lack of coordination and communication appears to be contributing to the generation of duplications and gaps in service coverage.

Interventions in two zones of Dhaka City Corporation (DCC) produced improvements in the distribution of government and NGO services for slum dwellers after the establishment of regular structured coordination mechanisms involving relevant service delivery agencies [5, 6]. Central to the decision making process for improving the local distribution of resources in those interventions was the existence of inventories of facilities at zonal and ward level. Several organizations have produced nationwide inventories [7, 8].

Nevertheless, the distribution of facilities depicted in available inventories is no longer valid. Towards the end of 1997, the service delivery strategy of key NGOs shifted from doorstep service provision to clinic-based services with a large increase in the number of satellite clinics serving slum areas. Hence the need for an updated inventory that includes all the facilities managed by government agencies and NGOs currently providing elements of the ESP in the Dhaka City Corporation area.

This inventory of government and NGO ESP health facilities in Dhaka city is one of the collaborative activities conducted by the Operations Research Project (ORP) as part of ongoing interventions to improve coordination among health care providers in urban areas. The objective of the inventory is to provide information about existing health facilities and ESP services available within the defined ward boundaries of DCC. The inventory is expected to serve as a planning and reference tool to city, zonal and ward level programme managers and other stakeholders and enable them to assess the distribution of local resources particularly in urban poor communities.

Since 1997, ORP has been conducting applied health systems research with government and non-government agencies as part of the National Integrated Population and Health Programme (NIPHP). ORP is one of the programmes of the Health and Population Extension Division of ICDDR,B: Centre for Health and Population Research. The focus of ORP is on improving interventions to increase the supply, quality, use and sustainability of the ESP. To this end, ORP undertakes operations research, disseminates findings and lessons learned and provides technical assistance for policy formulation and programme design.

Methodology

The study for the inventory of health and family planning services was conducted in all 10 zones of DCC from December 1998 to March 1999. A format was used for data collection (Annexure1). The format was pre-tested prior to data collection. Data were collected by trained interviewers. The following steps were followed for data collection:

Step 1:

Information was collected from secondary sources, such as Civil Surgeon office, DD-FP office, TFPO office, DCC zone offices, NGO offices and by reviewing literature. This information was used as a base for planning the next phase of data collection.

Step 2:

The data collectors visited the government and NGO health facilities (EPI Centres, FP Centres, Dispensary, Satellite Clinic, and Hospitals) and interviewed clinic in-charge and service providers.

Step 3:

All the facilities were physically verified by trained mappers. After verification of each individual facility, the exact spatial location was plotted on the base map. The base maps used in the study were originally developed by the Water and Sewerage Authority (WASA).

Step 4:

Reverification of missing outlets i.e. the facilities which were found missing during the step 3 of data collection were further verified through field visits.

Limitations

Although the private clinics, single practitioners and pharmacies are important sources of these services in urban area, the scope of the study did not include gathering information from those facilities. The study also excluded facilities situated within the boundaries of military institutions.

An aerial photograph of a coastal area, likely a port or industrial zone. The image shows a large body of water on the right side, with a curved shoreline. On the left side, there are several rectangular structures, possibly buildings or storage tanks, arranged in a row. In the center, there are more structures and what appears to be a road or path. The overall image is grainy and has a high-contrast, black-and-white appearance.
