CENTRE
FOR HEALTH AND POPULATION RESEARCH

The Centre

The Centre is a unique global resource dedicated to the highest attainable level of scientific research concerning the problems of health, population and development from a multidisciplinary perspective. The Centre is in an exceptional position to conduct research within the socio-geographical environment of Bangladesh, where the problems of poverty, mortality from readily preventable or treatable causes, and rapid population growth are well-documented and similar to those in many other developing countries of the world. The Centre currently has over 200 researchers and medical staff from 10 countries participating in research activities. The Centre's staff also provide care at its hospital facilities in Dhaka and Matlab to more than 100,000 patients a year and community-based maternal/child health and family planning services for a population of 100,000 in the rural Matlab area of Bangladesh. In addition, the Centre works closely with the Government of Bangladesh in both urban and rural extension projects, which aim at improving the planning and implementation of reproductive and child health services.

The Centre is an independent, non-profit international organization, funded by donor governments, multilateral organizations and international private agencies, all of which share a concern for the health problems of developing countries. The Centre has a rich tradition of research on topics relating to diarrhoea, nutrition, maternal and child health, family planning and population problems. Recently, the Centre has become involved in the broader social, economic and environmental dimensions of health and development, particularly with respect to women's reproductive health, sexually transmitted diseases, and community involvement in rural and urban health care.

The Centre is governed by a distinguished multinational Board of Trustees. The research activities of the Centre are undertaken by four scientific divisions: Clinical Sciences Division, Community Health Division, Laboratory Science Division, and Health and Population Extension Division. Administrative functions are undertaken by two divisions, namely Finance and Administration and Personnel.

Foreword

This inventory is the outcome of the survey of Urban Health and Family Planning Services conducted by the MCH-FP Extension Project (Urban) of ICDDR, B. The Project has worked closely with the Dhaka City Corporation (DCC) and other Non-government Organizations (NGO) in a partnership to improve urban health and family planning services. The partnership is jointly guided by Ministry of Health and Family Welfare (MOH&FW) and Ministry of Local Government Rural Development and Cooperatives (MOLGRDC) through the Interministerial Urban PHC/EPI/FP Coordination Committee.

One of the major objectives of the Project is to develop mechanisms for local level planning, coordination and implementation of Health and Family Planning activities in the urban areas. Therefore, I requested ICDDR,B to prepare this inventory to support local planning activities.

In order to establish an effective coordination mechanism at the Dhaka City Corporation (DCC), Zonal and Ward level, we need to have an inventory of Health and Family Planning facilities in Dhaka City Corporation area run by different organization along with their distribution by zone/ward. We also need to have zone/ward maps indicating geographical locations of Health Facilities to identify the gaps and overlaps in Health and Family Planning service delivery. This inventory gives us above mentioned information to establish practical mechanisms of coordination among service providers. This inventory also gives us the opportunity to minimize the gaps and overlaps through re-organizing and re-allocating service delivery points with mutual understanding among service providers and community leaders depending on community needs. This will enable the community leaders to take active part in the planning process of Health and Family Planning activities, which will ultimately bring community ownership to the program.

I whole heartedly appreciate the effort undertaken by MCH-FP Extension Project (Urban) in conducting the critical study and publishing the report.

The inventory is a concise and handy volume. It will serve as a ready reference to locate the working areas of different organizations within Dhaka City Corporation. Using this inventory, the urban health planners will be able to find out easily the location of the health service outlets as well as the services they provide. The inventory will be of added value to Health and Family Planning Coordination Committees at DCC and Zonal level. This document will help them to draw policy decision to encourage NGO and private sectors to initiate the provision of services in the areas where people are underserved.

I would like to congratulate those involved with the whole process of conducting such an important and useful study.

Mohammad Hanif
Mayor
Dhaka City Corporation

Preface

I am pleased to release the Inventory of Urban Health Facilities prepared by the MCH-FP Extension Project (Urban) of ICDDR,B. Over the years, ICDDR,B has acquired a unique expertise on urban development matters that ranges from operations research on reproductive health, child survival and environmental issues to providing technical assistance for capacity building to service delivery organizations working in urban areas.

The inventory of Urban Health Facilities includes the list of facilities run by different organizations along with their distribution by zone and ward. It also includes zone and ward maps indicating geographical locations of Health Facilities. This facilitates identification of the gaps and overlaps in Health and Family Planning service delivery. This inventory will serve as a ready reference to locate the working areas of different organizations within Dhaka City Corporation. Using this inventory, the urban health planners will be able to find out easily the location of the health service outlets as well as the services they provide. The inventory will be of added value to Health and Family Planning Coordination Committees at DCC and Zonal level.

In order to improve the urban Health and Family Planning service delivery, the Centre has established a partnership effort known as the Urban MCH-FP Initiative, with different ministries and agencies of the Government of Bangladesh and national non-government organizations, notably Concerned Women for Family Planning, a national NGO with wide experience in the delivery of MCH-FP services. The partnership receives financial and technical support from the United States Agency for International Development (USAID).

The overall goal of the partnership is to contribute to the reduction of mortality and fertility in urban areas. In practice, this joint work has already resulted in the development and design of interventions to improve access, coordination and sustainability of quality basic health services to urban dwellers with emphasis on the needs of the poor and those living in slum areas.

The Centre looks forward to continuing this collaboration and to assist in the wider dissemination and application of sustainable service delivery strategies in collaboration with providers in government, the NGOs and the private sector.

INTRODUCTION:

The MCH-FP Extension Project (Urban) of The International Centre for Diarrhoeal Disease Research (ICDDR,B), Bangladesh is conducting operation research activities in urban areas of the country with a variety of partners in the context of a broad coalition known as the Urban MCH-FP Initiative. These research activities are used in the design of interventions to improve the supply and utilisation of Health and Family Planning services in urban areas with emphasis on the urban poor.

The overall goal of the Initiative is to contribute to the reduction of fertility and mortality in urban areas.

Needs assessments conducted in zones of Dhaka City, confirmed that a key feature of the current urban health service delivery system is the little coordination, communication and referral among service providers. There is evidence that this situation even exist within the public sector when providers share the same premises. Lack of coordination tend to act as a barrier to efficient and effective service delivery resulting in uneven quality of care, redundancies and gaps in coverage. Hence, better coordination, communication and referral among service providers can help the providers to offer more effective health and family planning services to the urban people within their limited resources. As part of the Initiative a number of coordination mechanisms were established at City, Zonal and Ward level with the intention to improve local level planning. One of the first constraints recognised by these newly formed bodies was the absence of adequate information on the major providers of services. The overall objective of this inventory is to provide information on existing health and family planning services available within the defined ward boundaries of Dhaka City Corporation. In this way, this inventory is intended to serve as a planning tool to the City, Zonal and Ward committees and enable them to assess the distribution of local resources and relevance to the urban poor communities.

METHODOLOGY:

Dhaka City Corporation (DCC) is the largest city corporation in Bangladesh with an estimated population of 4201308.¹ DCC area is divided in 10 administrative zones and 90 wards. Some of these zones (Zone-1, 2, 3) are located in the old part of DCC area while others are in new part of the city. Average population in each zone is about 420130 with the largest population in zone-4 which is 630304 and the smallest in zone-10 which is 24300.

¹ The estimates of DCC area population for 1995 were calculated using the Mahalla Census of Bangladesh Bureau of Statistics carried out in 1991. An annual growth rate of 6% was assumed based on trends reported by UEP. (UEP, 1994).

An inventory of Health and Family Planning Services was conducted in all 10 zones of Dhaka City Corporation from April to June, 1995. Data was collected by trained interviewers who visited Government of Bangladesh, Non-government Organization, Private and Staff Health Centre's health facilities (EPI Centres, MCH-FP Centres, Dispensary, Satellite Clinic and Hospitals) and interviewed programme managers and service providers. A especially designed format was used for data collection. The format included information on the name and address of the facility; the services available; the staff and the type of organization managing the outlet. The location of the surveyed facilities was plotted in maps by trained mappers who also updated the ward boundaries and road networks as part of this study. The base maps used in the study were originally developed by the Water and Sewage Authority. The study is directed towards health facilities dedicated to services targeted to women and children. Although single practitioners and pharmacies are an important source of these services in urban area, the scope of the study did not include gathering information from single practitioners working from private chambers and pharmacies. Also, facilities situated within the boundaries of military institutions were excluded from the inquiry.

MCH-FP Extension Work at the Centre

An important lesson learned from the Matlab MCH-FP project is that a high CPR is attainable in a poor socioeconomic setting. The MCH-FP Extension Project (Rural) began in 1982 in two rural areas with funding from USAID to examine how elements of the Matlab programme could be transferred to Bangladesh's national family planning programme. In its first years, the Extension Project set out to replicate workplans, record-keeping and supervision, within the resource constraints of the government programme.

During 1986-89, the Centre helped the national programme to plan and implement recruitment and training, and ensure the integrity of the hiring process for an effective expansion of the work force of governmental Family Welfare Assistants. Other successful programme strategies scaled up or in the process of being scaled up to the national programme include doorstep delivery of injectable contraceptives, management action to improve quality of care, a management information system, and developing strategies to deal with problems encountered in collaborative work with local area family planning officials. In 1994, this project started family planning initiatives in Chittagong, the lowest performing division in the country.

In 1994, the Centre began an Urban MCH-FP Extension Project in Dhaka (based on its decade long experience in urban health) to provide a coordinated, cost-effective and replicable system of delivering MCH-FP services for Dhaka urban population. This important event marked an expansion of the Centre's capacity to test interventions in both urban and rural settings. The urban and rural extension projects have both generated a wealth of research data and published papers.

The Centre and USAID, in consultation with the government through the project's National Steering Committees, concluded an agreement for new rural and urban Extension Projects for the period 1993-97. Salient features include:

- To improve management, quality of care and sustainability of the MCH-FP programmes
- Field sites to use as "policy laboratories"
- Close collaboration with central and field level government officers
- Intensive data collection and analysis to assess the impact
- Technical assistance to GoB and NGO partners in the application of research findings to strengthen MCH-FP services.

The Division

The reconstituted Health and Population Extension Division (HPED) has the primary mandate to conduct operations research to scale up the research findings, provide technical assistance to NGOs and GoB to strengthen the national health and family planning programme.

The Centre has a long history of accomplishments in applied research which focuses on the application of simple, effective, appropriate and accessible health and family planning technologies to improve the health and well-being of the underserved and population-in-need. There are several projects in the Division which specialize in operations research in health, family planning, environmental health and epidemic control measures which cuts across several Divisions and disciplines in the Centre. The MCH-FP Extension Project (Rural), of course, is the Centre's established operations research project but the recent addition of its urban counterpart - MCH-FP Extension Project (Urban), as well as Environmental Health and Epidemic Control Programmes have enriched the Division with a strong group of diverse expertise and disciplines to enlarge and consolidate its operations research activities. There are several distinctive characteristics of these endeavors in relation to health services and policy research. First, the public health research activities of these Projects focus on improving programme performances which has policy implications at the national level and lessons for international audience. Secondly, these Projects incorporate the full cycle of conducting applied programmatic and policy relevant research in actual GoB and NGO service delivery infrastructures; dissemination of research findings to the highest levels of policy makers as well as recipients of the services at the community level; application of research findings to improve programme performance through systematic provision of technical assistance; and scaling-up of applicable findings from pilot phase to the national programme at Thana, Ward, District and Zonal levels both in the urban and rural settings.
